John Smith, your psychological profile is interesting, as it indicates the simultaneous presence of conflicting energies. It seems to be present in you a desire for awakening, or at least a weak drive toward a deeper and more realistic understanding of the world; but at the same time we detect an opposite need, a tendency to seek comfort and security in the dominant positions, those of the masses, to put it bluntly. You probably experience conflicting feelings, on one hand the need to be part of society without being deprived of anything, and on the other hand an urge, although sporadic, to find meaning in things and more generally in life. It is not easy for anyone to reconcile the two spheres, the social and work life with the inner one, and you are an example of this. You need safety, facts, unshakable certainties, however you get a little doubt from time to time... don't you? You still tend to respond hastily to questions that your deepest and most authentic part brings up, but this makes you only a partial sleeper: let us say that yours is a sleep disturbed by a few noises here and there. We see this characteristic positively; in fact, you are in a position to choose. Do you prefer to take a little pill to sleep better, or to try to wake up from this restless sleep and research the causes of the interference with a clear mind?

Your choice.
